

A Map of Your Internal System

Personality is not unitary. You, like all other human beings, are made up of multiple parts that are constantly interacting in relationship with one another inside of you. You already contain the resources you need to live a balanced and harmonious life, but those resources may be constrained by the way your internal system has evolved based on socialization and the need to survive/function in your life, both in the past and present.

